

Pot-fu will accept the portfolio.

The Parliament held a preliminary meeting today. A hundred members from Tientsin are arriving this afternoon. After some hesitation, the Secretary of the Anfu Parliament handed over the Parliamentary documents, etc. yesterday.

Tientsin, June 12.—Fighting round Shachikuan began on Saturday and continued yesterday. The Fengtien left wing apparently made a surprise attack.

Two trainloads of wounded Chihli soldiers reached Tientsin yesterday evening. Considerable Chihli reinforcements were sent up to Shachikuan yesterday and this morning. Other traffic has been suspended.

Parliamentarians Attack Tung Kung

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, June 10.—Minister Tung Kung of the Ministry of Finance is the victim of an attack by the Parliamentarians in Tientsin, according to reports from Chinese sources received here. He is accused of having raised money at illegal rates of interest to tide the Government over the Dragon Boat Festival, of having employed men in the Ministry who did not come up to the standards that he himself has set, and of failing to meet administrative and military expenses.

Minister Tung Kung when questioned about these matters confined his attention to the accusation of having raised money at illegal rates of interest to tide the Government over the festival period. He declared that not only had no money been raised at illegal rates, but that no money at all had been borrowed, but that advances had simply been made for the crisis of the Dragon Boat Festival from the surplus salt revenues.

The telegram from the M.P.'s declares that Tung Kung is guilty of three crimes:

First, it says, he has employed Mr. Yen Chu and Mr. Hsu Chao-shih, who do not measure up to the standards that Tung Kung himself has set for retention in the Ministry of Finance.

Second, he has failed to meet the urgent demands for funds to pay the military and administrative expenses of the Government.

Third, and most important, Tung Kung has given a high rate of interest, as high as 40 percent in contracting loans for tiding over the Dragon Boat Festival, when he himself has condemned the contracting of loans at rates of over 30 percent.

The Peking Shih Pao declares that the Pekingfu authorities are not at all satisfied with the work of Mr. Yen and Mr. Hsu and that therefore Mr. Tung Kung has ordered their dismissal.

Tung Kung Has Plan To Redeem Banknotes

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, June 9.—In order to back up the credit of the Peking Government the Ministry of Finance has organized, according to Chinese reports, a Board which shall be responsible for the redemption of banknotes, called Fixed Redemption Bank notes to the extent of $2,000,000, to which $200,000 of the Salt Surplus will be turned over every month, in addition to $80,000 from the Hatamen tax collections to be used for the payment of interest on these bank notes at the rate of 30 percent.

On this Board have been placed prominent officials of the capital: the Commander-in-Chief of the Metropolitan Police Force, the Superintendent of Police, the two presidents of the Peking Chamber of Commerce, the Director of the Government Cash Bureau, as well as the manager of the Peking branch of this bureau. These men, say the reports, are to be responsible for the redemption of these bank notes, at any time that they shall be presented.

Arrangement has been made also that notes will be accepted for payments at railway stations, telegraph offices, and for paying the Peking stamp taxes, if one half is paid in cash and one half in the notes.

Army Of 400,000 Is Hope Of Peking

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, June 10.—There has been a strong newspaper campaign to induce Li Yuan-hung to look at the more practical side of the case and not to insist on the letter of all of his demands being carried out. It is pointed out that 14 of the 22 provinces have announced their willingness to support his presidency and that therefore he should go ahead with these.

The troops in these fourteen provinces are estimated to be 1,000,000 and means may be immediately taken to disband them. A national army of about 400,000 men developed and trained, 200,000 being left in the provinces to keep order and the others being mobilized for the government. After sufficient training has been obtained it is suggested that those 200,000 picked troops under the command of the president and under the leadership of Generals Wu, Feng, and Wang Chen-ping be used to clean up the unruly provinces.

Clairvoyant Knew It Was Coming About

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, June 12.—Superstitious persons throughout the capital are making much of the assumption of Li Yuan-hung of the Presidency yesterday as being in accord with the predictions of a noted fortune teller who foresaw this day as one fraught with great consequences for China and Japan.

The matter came to the attention of the police who had to disperse several crowds that besieged the more popular fortune tellers' booths.

Japanese Traveler And Author Is Here

Mr. Y. Tezumi, who is a prominent Japanese liberal leader, author of a number of notable works and world traveler, is passing through Shanghai on his way to Korea with the purpose of making a study of conditions in that country.

Mr. Tezumi is a son-in-law of Baron Goto, now Mayor of Tokyo and formerly Minister of Home Affairs and Minister of Foreign Affairs. For the past three years he has been traveling abroad and in recent months has delivered hundreds of addresses in his native country. He will spend several days in Shanghai before proceeding on to Seoul.

JAPAN TO QUIT SIBERIA, WHEN, IF, AND ALSO BUT

Uchida Says "Immediate Withdrawal" Is Not Justified

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 12.—The Foreign Minister, Count Uchida, has issued the following statement to the press:

"The foreign policy of the Kato Ministry does not involve any changes. It will give effect to the agreements concluded and the declarations made at Washington. Japan at present is strictly neutral in China and when a unified and stable Government has been established Japan as well as the other Powers will be willing to extend the necessary financial assistance. The withdrawal of troops from Hankow, Peking and other points in North China is only delayed owing to the disturbed conditions. The situation in Siberia does not justify the immediate withdrawal of troops, but when order has been restored and the protection of Japanese is guaranteed the troops will speedily be withdrawn."

NEW BOOK TELLS WHOLE STORY OF OPIUM TRAFFIC

Every Phase Of Subject Dealt With In Volume Issued By International Body

"The War Against Opium," a new volume written and edited by the Directors of The International Anti-Opium Association and just issued contains full and accurate information concerning the general campaign against the traffic in opium and other narcotics. The subject is treated from an impartial standpoint which is non-party, non-sectarian and non-national, favoring no cause but the reduction of narcotic production to medicinal requirements.

The book commences with a brief historical account of the opium trade, and gives full information with an accompanying map on the present state of poppy cultivation in China and of the widespread trade in morphia. There are chapters on the attitude of the different Governments, chiefly Great Britain, India, Japan, and the United States.

Detailed information is given concerning the opium monopolies of Hongkong, the Straits Settlements, the Federated Malay States, Macao and Kuantung and Taingtau. There are chapters on the medical and legal aspects of the trade in narcotics.

A full appendix contains various documents of importance, such as the Hague Opium Convention, the Dangerous Drugs Act, Article 295 of the Versailles Treaty, and other documents valuable for reference. By its careful, and up to date, collection of facts and documents it forms an indispensable handbook for all who are in any way interested in Chinese problems and in a subject which has been set as one of the most important tasks of the League of Nations.

It is a work whose possession is essential to all desirous of securing an accurate view of the drug traffic, whether they favor the efficient control of the production of narcotics, their manufacture and sale or not.

The book is of about 250 pages and is illustrated by photographs and has a well prepared index.

If fire should sweep through your office tonight, in what shape would you find your records tomorrow?

These records are the very foundation of your business. Without them it would come to a standstill. Fire insurance companies pay only the amount of the actual loss sustained on the Day of the Fire. You are required to prove the amount of this actual loss by your records. If your records are destroyed you are helpless.

You should find out what fire hazards exist in and around your building and what you can do to protect yourself against them. Failure to do so may mean disaster.

The Safe-Cabinet is the only type of safe that brings its contents undamaged through the most severe fire.

The Three Musketeers

BY DOMINO

Out of the shadows of the past As from these faded tapestry Of Time's procession slow and vast, I step to bid you bear with me; The while your fancy I engage To look upon another age.

—Edward Knoblock.

Picture fans from every part of the Settlement crowded to the Isis Theater on Monday night and practically filled all parts of the big house. Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers" was the magnet that drew them. It was a typical Twentieth Century audience. There were the ladies with dresses reaching downwards and upwards; there were the men either in spotlessly white shirt fronts or in negligee flannels. We were all just outside the confines ruled over by a Council of Reformers, so that most of us were able to nibble at a cigarette or puff at a favorite pipe without fear of the law.

The house was brilliantly lighted. The enlarged orchestra was tickling the ears of the musical with classical selections.

Suddenly the lights go out. The Twentieth disappears and almost in the twinkling of an eye we have bridged the years between and are living in the Seventeenth Century. The flats of Shanghai have disappeared only to give way to the solitaires of Court; the forest lands of France; the waters of the English Channel; the undulating beauties of the country.

The banker, the broker, the long man, the store man,—aye, and e'en the shroff—have disappeared and in their place live the gallant courtier, the gentle dame, the man of action seeking fame at the cannon's mouth, and the crafty statesman, who in secret would compass the downfall of a beautiful, if erring, queen.

And whence this transformation? The eye of the camera! The genius of a Douglas Fairbanks! The acting of a powerful cast. The inspiration of an Alexandre Dumas!

The great picture—deservedly called great—"The Three Musketeers" is one to be seen and not forgotten. In that picture you see infinitely more than in the spoken play—beautiful as it is. In that picture you see even more than in the written book.

True, with the mind's eye you gaze into the recesses of the creator's soul, but here we are spared the effort. Here the camera pictures vividly to you the pomp of palace, the poverty of cottage; it lights up the dark places of the dungeon; it dims the splendor of the sun. It takes you into the recesses of the forest, or unto the tops of the lofty mountains. It discovers the depths, it ascends to the heights. There is no limit to the camera's possibilities, and well we may be thankful when it is used to depict so powerful and wholesome a story as "The Three Musketeers."

The story of "The Three Musketeers" is too well known to need repeating, suffice to say that the present version brings out all the most brilliant features and carries the interest from beginning to end. It was truly marvellous to feel the excitement of joy or fear in certain scenes; it was just as pleasing to join in the hearty laughter that punctuated the twelve reels.

Not a word spoken! Yet great producing; beautiful picturing; and splendid acting so "right" the audience that when virtue triumphed, and the hero held in his strong arms the beautiful heroine, the Isis people, from gallery to stalls, were compelled to show both sympathy and joy in enthusiastic applause.

As for the dominating character—Douglas Fairbanks—all one can say is that he was "D'Artagnan the Magnificent." I can understand his appeal to a world of admirers. I can quite see why he won for a "M. Mary." "The World's Sweet heart."

Voyage Across Pacific Of Bark William Dollar Believed To Be New Record

Vessel's Trip From Shanghai To Puget Sound In 31 Days Subject Of Interesting Report
Published By Seattle Paper

Concerning a recent remarkable voyage made across the Pacific from Shanghai by the American bark "William Dollar," a report concerning the voyage that appeared in The Seattle Times of April 30 will be found of interest, particularly to shipping men.

The article in question is given as follows:

When the four-mast bark William Dollar was towed into Port Townsend yesterday after her great run across the Pacific from Shanghai, Capt. P. A. McDonald, the master, called upon Merrill Robinson, Seattle manager of the Robert Dollar Company, to confirm the news that the sailing vessel had arrived two or three weeks ahead of time.

Mr. Robinson congratulated the master and then added, "I have some news for you—a telegram from San Francisco. Your new daughter, born April 18, is a thriving youngster of eight pounds."

Then Captain McDonald forgot for the moment all about his great voyage across the Pacific. Whether Captain McDonald's thirty-one-day voyage from Shanghai to Cape Flattery sets a new sailing record for that route cannot be determined until the old records are checked up, but it stands as one of the great feats of recent years.

In an effort to check up the record, waterfront men went this morning to H. M. Thornton, pioneer ship contractor of Seattle. Mr. Thornton will have to delve into his old records before he can speak definitely, but he recalled met True in New York in 1917 while he was serving as an instructor in the United States Air service, she said, and they had married. Shortly afterwards they went to West Africa, where he had a position with a mining company, and their baby was born there. The boy is now three years old. They soon went to England because of his illness and from February to September, 1920, he was in a home for the cure of drug addicts in Wales. After a short time he disappeared, telling his wife he was going to commit suicide. She found him in London. Then he served a short jail sentence for obtaining drugs under false pretences, and in February disappeared again. She, being an actress, was on tour and called on Scotland Yard to help her find him.

Mrs. True stayed by her husband all through the trial and was one of the hardest workers for his reprieve, refusing to believe that he killed the other woman, or holding that he had killed her in a fit of insanity and was not responsible for his deed.

Brown Leaves For Chefoo To Do Navy "Y" Work

Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Brown left for Chefoo Monday. Mr. Brown, who is Executive secretary of the Navy Y. M. C. A. at Shanghai, will be in charge of the extensive work of the Navy "Y" to be carried on in Chefoo for the next three months. His staff of volunteer workers will proceed to Chefoo shortly. These young men and women who are giving their summer vacations to welfare work for the sailors are: Messrs. Erston Miller, Joseph Van Hook and Miss Frances Taylor of the American school; Miss Hilda Murray, Miss Marie Spidel, Miss Harriet Rietveld and Miss Eleanor Kitchen of the Shanghai Y. W. C. A.; Miss Emma Gustafson of the Centenary Office; Miss Mildred Crane of St. John's University and Mrs. Allison Hayes, wife of Chaplain Hayes of the U. S. S. Huron.

The summer home of the "Y" staff is pleasantly located near the beach and the sailors' "Y" headquarters are near the landing jetty. The Destroyer squadron will leave Shanghai for Chefoo about the 22nd of this month with the U. S. S. Buffalo, which will arrive here in a few days, as flag ship. The Huron, due here today will leave for Chefoo soon after the fourth of July.

Arthur C. Ellis will be in charge of the Shanghai Navy "Y" during Mr. Brown's absence.

Carlton Opened As "Willow Grove"

Scores of visitors to the Carlton Cafe last night found that popular establishment transformed into a "Willow Grove," with an ice fountain in the center. Dozens of willow trees, each festooned with miniature electric lights, were planted around the room, and when the battery of ceiling and wall fans were turned on the willows swayed in the breeze, giving the place a cool and refreshing appearance that made dancing a comfortable process.

The ice fountain started off like a young glacier but had more the appearance of a swimming pool when the main body of "seppars" arrived. This was due to the fact that the ice, in fifteen big cakes, was put into the fountain a bit too early in the evening; with the result most of it had melted when the ball room opened. Manager Ellis said this mistake would be guarded against in the future, and promises a regular iceberg tonight and hereafter.

But with the swaying willows and the young pond in the middle of the room, the place was distinctly cooler, with the result that every body present had unusually good time.

Laundry Is Bought By Hotels Company

The Shanghai Hotels Company, Ltd., has purchased the Shanghai Sanitary Laundry from the liquidators, it was announced yesterday. The hotel company plans to use the Steam Laundry to cater for work from the hotels, and it was said that possibly facilities will later be extended to the general public.

The Hotels Company assumes control of the Steam Laundry immediately.

to the theater in a closed cab, changed their seats three times during the performance, and were arrested while hidden from the audience by box curtains. A revolver, and a wedding ring, been built in 1917 and commissioned in 1919, had been at the destroyer base at San Diego and later at San Pedro, with the submarines, I asked the captain if he had ever run into anything. In a newspaper office everyone would savvy that the indefinite object of the proposition into meant a story. The skipper, however, scenting a collision in his dry humorous way simply said "Not yet; and I hope we don't."

There were a couple of gobs on the ship lying alongside the "Dorsey," as I came aboard, who had certainly run into something. They were engaged in a task that no Shanghai man-cure-anah could do. That is to say they were cleaning out the flues, and one had to ask them to smile to be sure that they were hard working sailors and not animate pillars of coal.

Whether they are "Dorsey" gobs or not, I don't know and I doubt if their own officers could recognise them. When one is skipping about from ship to ship, in the quartet of the 14th division that is moored together in the harbor, the ships all look alike from the deck. But if you don't think all destroyers are different, get yourself invited to a wardrobe tiffin or tea and you'll do a Christopher Columbus up to date.

True's Life In Shanghai Told Of At London Trial

pearl necklace, and platinum and diamond wristlet watch, later identified as belonging to Gertrude Yates, were found on him. Some of his underclothing was daubed with blood.

The London newspapers carried the gruesome story of the tragedy by the column as it progressed through the inquest, the West London Police Court, and finally into Old Bailey's before Mr. Justice McCardie.

HIS FIGHT FOR LIFE

Then began True's fight for life and the amazing tale of his wanderings back and forth across the world, including his war in Shanghai in the Customs. With a smile, and with his wife standing by also smiling and true to the very end the airman pleaded not guilty. Sir Richard Muir and Mr. Eustace Fulton, for the prosecution, produced witnesses who identified True as Gertrude Yates' lover, including the maid servant who found the body. She testified that just before she found the bruised and battered remains of what had been a beautiful woman True had walked out of the bedroom and told her her mistress was sleeping and not to bother her. Another witness, a friend of the murdered woman, testified that she had told her that she feared True the night before the tragedy while they were together in Piccadilly.

The murder was pinned to True so conclusively that Sir H. Curtis Bennett, K. C., and Mr. Roland Oliver, for the defence, saw no other escape than to plead insanity. It was the insanity plea that has stirred up the resultant outcry.

Sir H. Curtis-Bennett asserted that True had been abnormal from his earliest youth, and had been in two serious air crashes during the war, one at Farnborough, and one at Gosport. As a result of one of the falls, True was given morphine and so became a morphia maniac—a sad victim of the war.

Numerous witnesses, including four physicians, True's wife, his aunt, and intimate friends were called by the defence and all gave incidents from his life to prove the defense's plea of insanity. Among the grotesque idiosyncracies they related were:

He had a penchant for Chinese fortune tellers while in Shanghai and continually haunted palmists tents, Swami mystic's homes and other fortune-tellers. When on the Gold Coast he never wore a hat and went about all day in pajamas.

He was bombastic and a braggart. At Portsmouth he went about in a bathchair with toys he played with.

He would always point and giggle at people with side-wiskers.

He was continually running from one corner of the globe to another.

Dr. East, senior Medical officer of Brixton prison, and three other doctors testified that in their opinion True was insane. He had suffered from mental disorders from birth, they said, and was now a morphia maniac, and in their opinion could not distinguish between right and wrong and should not be held criminally responsible for the murder he had committed.

While True was staying with her recently she said that he had asserted he might as well enjoy himself because he would soon be dead because three fortune-tellers in Buenos Aires, Shanghai and San Francisco, had told him he would be killed for a woman.

Mrs. Angus also related incidents of insanity in True's youth. Once, at the age of five, some of his rabbits died, she said, and he buried them with their heads sticking out of the ground so he could see them.

He was educated at Bedford Grammar School, she said, and had a reputation as a confirmed liar. In 1908 he went to New Zealand, she said, returning two years later, and in 1911 went to the Argentine.

Later he came to China, served during the war, and spent some time in America.

WIFE TELLS STORY

The airman's wife also gave testimony in his behalf. She had

TRANS-SIBERIAN RAILROAD OPEN, FARES MODERATE

Rate From Manchuli To Moscow 245 Gold Roubles

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, June 10.—In a recent interview Mr. Semion Nikolaevitch, Deputy Minister for Transport of the Russian Far Eastern Republic, said at Chita:

"Negotiations are still in progress between the Government of the Far Eastern Republic and the International Wagons-Lits Company concerning the running of the company's cars over our lines. It appears to me that an amicable arrangement will be reached."

"With regard to the opening of the Siberian railroad for passenger traffic, such traffic already exists and arrangements have been made with Soviet Russia respecting through fares to Moscow. The old process of having to purchase large quantities of Soviet paper money has been done away with and the Soviet Government has arranged a gold standard so that our (E. R.) money is acceptable for the Moscow Government lines."

"Foreigners desiring to travel through to Europe will find it more advantageous and cheaper to travel in groups, engaging a special car for the purpose. For- eigners should possess the necessary visas from their consuls and application should afterwards be made to the representative of the E. R. Government at Harbin (Mr. Ozornin) who will afford every possible facility for travel."

"Applications for special cars should also be made to him so that the cars can be ready on the arrival of the passengers at Manchuli. In addition to large cars with seating accommodation for twenty-four persons the Chita Government can furnish smaller cars with a capacity of from four to ten seats."

"The Chita Government hopes to reduce the passenger and freight rates on its lines in the near future."

"The cost of a first-class car with accommodation for twenty-four persons now is as follows: Manchuli Station to Chita, G. R. 500
Chita to Verkhne-Udinsk, 680
Verkhne-Udinsk to Moscow, 1,450
Use of car, Chita to Moscow and Moscow to Chita, 600

Total to Moscow, G. R. 3,230
"This makes the fare for each passenger G. R. 135. The car will be taken care of by the Soviet Railways and switched on to their trains. The above figures represent Soviet currency in gold which has quite recently been obtained."

"The cost of a car, also first-class, capable of accommodating ten persons is as follows: Manchuli to Chita, G. R. 300
Chita to Verkhne-Udinsk, 400
Verkhne-Udinsk to Moscow, 1,450
Use of car Chita to Moscow and Moscow to Chita, 300

Total to Moscow, G. R. 2,450
"This brings the fare of each passenger to G. R. 245. There will be no delays at Verkhne-Udinsk in connection with the Soviet Government regulations."

"The cost of a car, also first-class, capable of accommodating ten persons is as follows: Manchuli to Chita, G. R. 300
Chita to Verkhne-Udinsk, 400
Verkhne-Udinsk to Moscow, 1,450

Japanese Press Opposes Cabinet

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokyo, June 13.—With regard to the personality and ability of the new Premier, Admiral Baron Kato, while none grudge appreciation and admiration, it is generally observed that the new Cabinet as a whole will have no good effect upon the reform of the popular sentiment. The press is still strongly making accusations that the makeup of the new Cabinet is a reversal of constitutional government.

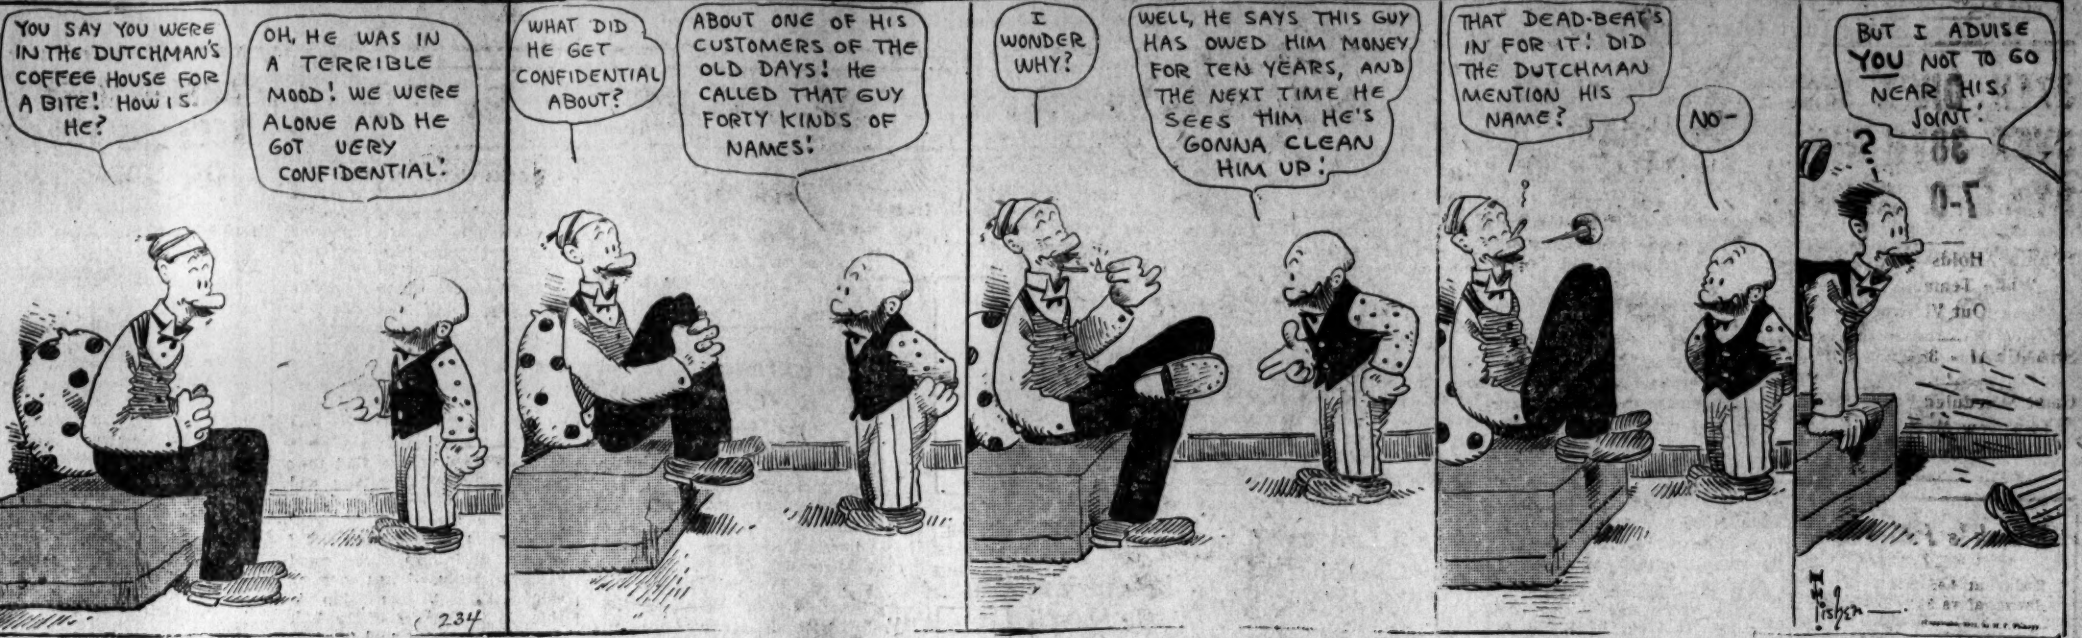

The Jiji states that as a sequel to the appearance of the non-party Government supported by both the Seiyukai Party and the House of Peers, the people at large who looked forward to a complete change for the better in public feeling are deeply disappointed and will without doubt come to seek for further change in the political situation.

The Asahi says that though the new Cabinet may be called a coalition ministry, in conjunction with the Seiyukai Party, from the spiritual point of view, it is imperative for the Cabinet to reform the misgovernment of its predecessor and to exercise a national policy that will embody the spirit of the time.

The Nichinichi writes that the present Cabinet is anything but a people's Cabinet and that it is a reversal Cabinet which does not accord with the trend of the time and which has no connection whatever with the popular feeling. Influential business circles take the view that Admiral Baron Kato has ability enough to be Premier but it is doubtful whether or not the Minister of Finance is able and competent.

The Operatic Concert

Angelo Pilotto, baritone of the Italian Opera Company which set out on a tour of the Far East and was stranded in Manila, was given an ovation last night at the Town Hall when his magnificent voice, at times towering above the full Municipal Orchestra, soared into the hearts of the large audience at the concert.

Pilotto was applauded and cheered at the conclusion of his really brilliant rendering of the prologue from "I Pagliacci," the first number of the second half of the program, and he was obliged to respond to an encore. He had been heard in the Valentin air from "Faust" and in the Aida-Amonasso duet with Madame Tcherkasskaya, but in neither number did he reach the heights as he did in the "Pagliacci," notably in the beautiful andante which he repeated in response to the insistent applause.

Ying with Pilotto for honors at one of Shanghai's most unusual musical treats was Madame Tcherkasskaya and her singing of "Cantique d'Amour" will long be remembered. She again sang the "Hymne au Soleil" and was heard to advantage, more so last night with the orchestra, than on previous occasions, with only the his powers.

A word about Maestro Paci. Never has the conductor entered more into the spirit of the music, he was interpreting than he did last night. He and his musicians were thoroughly in sympathy with their music and the soloists. It was an unusual concert, a rare opportunity for Shanghai.

Sunday - Two Games.

Huron vs 37th Division

Shanghai vs 38th Division

(First game at 3:15 o'clock)

The 37th Division of the "Destroyer Flotilla" won over the 38th Division again on the local grounds yesterday afternoon in a shut-out game, marked by heavy batting on one side, and the excellent twirling of Sailor Hopkins on the other. The 37th men scored in every one of the sixth innings they went to bat. They rapped in nine runs in the fifth, Hopkins held the 38th to five scattered bingles. He fanned 10 men. Only two opponents got past first.

The game was good to watch all the way through. The 38th started with a number of substitutes, due, they said, to several of their first string men having run off to a picnic up country. The 37th got to scoring immediately and they had the game cinched at every stage in spite of some stellar work on the part of some of the 38th players.

In the fifth the 37th boys batted once and a half around. Three pitchers were used to break up the scoring, but with several long drives and many errors resulting from the furious play following, a figure "9" was hung on the score board at the third out. The 37th got four hits in that inning, one of which was a homer by Calvery.

SHANGHAI V. 38TH TODAY
Shanghai meets the 38th Division at its best strength this afternoon commencing at 4:45 o'clock. The sailors' captain yesterday saved their star pitcher, Lew Placencia, to work against Gallop's men today. With their full lineup out and in action the game will be a hummer.

Shanghai took a nice workout after the Navy game last evening, with a dozen or more men in uniform. The new men of very promising style showed for practice. One is a first sacker, named Lake, who played in Hongkong for the last few seasons. He may be used today in Wood's place, as the latter is still suffering from his bad ankle. The other recruit was an infielder named Hatch. He worked at short and at second and he showed a lot of class. He will probably be given a trial this afternoon.

Howland, the third sacker, who showed such good class in the few games he has played here this season will not play again this year. He is now in the General Hospital recovering from an operation for appendicitis, which was performed Sunday by Dr. McCracken. Howland was stricken suddenly on Sunday, just as he was planning to go to the ball field and don a uniform. He will be greatly missed in the local lineup this year.

Yesterday's score follows:

KUMAGAE BEATS WALLY BATES IN TWO HARD SETS

California Star Who Will Play Here Soon, Pushed The Davis Cup Star

Tokio, June 6.—Displaying the brand of tennis that has made him a popular court idol in the United States, Ichiya Kumagae, Japan's star in the last Davis Cup tournament, defeated Wallace Bates, captain of the California team and former collegiate champion of America, 6-0, 6-2, at the Tokio Lawn Tennis Club yesterday afternoon. Exhibition matches with the California players followed the challenge round in the national tournament, the Californians winning two doubles matches and spitting even on the four singles contests.

Kumagae was at the top of his form, playing a faultless game. He had to do it, for although the score may not indicate it Bates pushed the world renowned star every bit of the way. Shots that seemed almost impossible whizzed by the Californian at lightning speed to touch the court just a fraction of an inch inside the line. Kumagae had everything in the world, but Bates remained steady, playing a wonderful game himself when it seemed that the Davis Cup star's strokes would take the heart and fight out of any opponent.

Later in the afternoon Bates got his revenge, however, when he and Wilson triumphed over Kumagae and Nomura in the doubles, 6-6, 6-2, 6-4. The Californians tried to keep the ball away from Kumagae as much as possible, just as Kumagae and Nomura tried to play Wilson, but Wilson held up his end of the game in great style. In no place was he found unequal to the occasion, and at the net and in using his chop stroke he played a brilliant game.

The match was almost equal to the Bates-Kumagae contest with its thrills and brief moments of suspension; the two together made up one of the best tennis programs ever staged in Japan.

In the other matches between the club stars and the visiting Californians Conrad defeated Tanaka, 6-3, 6-3; Wilson defeated Magnuson, 6-3, 8-6; Tomioka defeated Jensen 6-3, 14-12; and Conrad and Jensen took the doubles contest from Yamasaki and Oltmans, 6-2, 6-3.

SHRINERS' FIRST PICNIC FEATURES BASEBALL GAME

At the annual Outing and Picnic of Nomad Oasis, A.O.N. M.S., held Sunday on the grounds of Done Chi College at Woosung, a regular baseball game between Benedicts and Single Men featured a long list of sporting events, regular and otherwise. There were a chicken race (whatever that is), an egg race, a cigarette race, jumps and other unusual items on the program aside from the said baseball game.

One hundred Shriners attended the outing. The party started from the Astor House at 9:15 a.m., and proceeded to the picnic spot in 35 autos. Timms and teas were served under the supervision of Mr. W. Sharp Bardarson of the Astor. Mr. Lee C. Solomon was chairman of the party.

There was Mah Jong, Bridge and other quiet games including indoor baseball, for the ladies and their closest attendants, but the baseball game, The Benedicts versus the Single Shriners was the big item of entertainment.

The score, or the only extant bits of it available from those who were on the spot is attached. Nothing but Times at Bat and Runs appeared to count. There may have been errors; there may have been put outs, and even assists, but the man with the book said that Runs were the only things of import.

Here they are:

Harry And Tom Veitch Win At Bowls

Harry Veitch and Tom Veitch proved themselves much too good for their clubmates C. Thompson and R. Phillips Monday when the latter were defeated 29-14 in the open pairs championship.

The leaders were evenly matched, Charlie if anything being a little more consistent but the "old master" was in his happiest mood and both in driving and drawing he was all over the popular vice president.

In the singles G. B. Stormes defeated M. Scott, 21-13, and S. Marks beat Guy Manwaring, 21-15.

English Women Soccer Team To Tour America

An English women's soccer football team will tour the United States this month and next playing the best American men's clubs. The United States Football Association has sanctioned a proposal of the Newcastle United Ladies' organization, champion in the women's division of the game in Great Britain.

Cricket Results

(Reuter's Service)
London, June 12.—Cricket results:
At Lord's Middlesex beat Somerset by an innings and 245 runs. For Middlesex, Hendren scored 167 not out and Mr. G. E. V. Crutchley 106.
At Manchester, Lancashire beat Notts by an innings and 108 runs. For Lancashire, R. Tyldesley scored 105 and Cook took seven wickets for 23 runs in the second innings.

Williams Close To Ruth's 1921 Home Run Mark

St. Louis, June 12.—Kenneth R. Williams of the Browns made his fifteenth home run of the year today in the game against Babe Ruth and the New York Yankees. St. Louis had little difficulty in winning the game by a score of 7-1. One man was on when Williams made his home run.

Williams is four homers behind Babe Ruth's world's record established last season. On June 12 last year, Babe smashed his 19th home run of the season off Sutherland, the Detroit hurler, at the Detroit Park. Ruth made 59 circuit clouts a year ago while Williams aggregated 24.

Architects Defendants In British Court Case

In the British Supreme Court yesterday Judge Peter Grain was engaged in hearing a suit for damages arising out of a building contract, brought by Mrs. L. E. B. Freeman against Messrs. Cumine and Milne for $4,000.

Mr. N. Langley Smith, who appeared for the plaintiff, in opening his case, said the plaintiff, who was the wife of Mr. Thomas Freeman carrying on business as a merchant at 2 Route de Say Zoung, in company with her husband, approached the defendants in May last with a view to erecting a house on a plot of land they had at 2 Route de Say Zoung. There was a mow of land on which the house could be built. The defendants were asked to inspect the site and it was explained to the architects that the house was required by the Freemans not as a dwelling for themselves but as a commercial proposition.

Certain plans were submitted and these were not approved as they did not provide rooms of the large size specified. The defendants thereupon prepared plans a second time and these were approved with certain alterations.

The defendants appointed contractors and they sent in large bills, and the plaintiff suggested that there must be contractors who would do the work for a less sum. Freeman obtained a plan from the defendants with the object of showing it to other contractors, and they submitted tenders to the defendants and not plaintiff. The contract which was actually entered into was on the defendant's own specification, the attorney said.

On September 21 last when the building was being proceeded with and after the brick wall had been built two feet high it was found that there was an encroachment on the Municipal road, counsel continued. This was the main point of the dispute. The encroachment took place somewhere between the end of Freeman's property, and the flower shop, and the encroachment was pointed out to the contractor by the representative of the French Municipal Council, but the contractor continued to build and it was only after the French Council threatened the contractor that the alteration was made.

The principal contention of the plaintiff was that the building as at present erected was very much smaller in size than arranged. When this encroachment took place the defendants made certain alterations in removing the building so as not to encroach on the road. The defendants alleged that the shortage in the actual rooms was caused by the encroachment and that the encroachment was due to the fact that the defendants refused to produce any title deeds or plans to guide them as to the extent of the property.

Mr. Langley Smith, in answer to that allegation said that this might be alright if the encroachment had only been of a size which actually corresponded to the actual size of the rooms. If there was anything in the point of non-production of title deeds the defendants had to account why there was the further shortage in the size of the rooms.

Mr. Langley Smith said the defendants had acted with gross professional neglect and gross professional incompetence. It was a serious charge to bring against the defendants. One particular point, Mr. Smith said, that entitled him to bring this charge against them was that they failed to apply to the French Council for a road line which was one of the essential requirements in any building operation. They failed and they had no official idea as to where that house would have to be put in relation to the road. There was also the question of bricks. Mr. Smith contended they were not according to specification, and the walls as well were not according to specified thickness.

The contract also provided for the house to be ready by March 20 last, and the plaintiff had already lost three months' rent.

The defendants had made a counter-claim on the question of fees, which the plaintiff strongly contested. Mr. Langley Smith pointed out that it was a conditional question that before defendants received any remuneration the building was first to be erected. In the alternative if it was not a conditional precedent, he submitted that the defendants were not entitled to any remuneration for their services in consequence of the building proving abortive.

12 REELS OF HUMOR
— AND PATHOS — 12

A jealous and easily influenced King—a beautiful and misunderstood Queen—a foreign Duke who has boldly displayed his infatuation for the Queen. These form the "eternal triangle." A wily Prime Minister, Cardinal Richelieu, makes use of this to serve his own purposes. To keep the King and Queen apart he works to aggravate the King's jealousy and to impugn the Queen's honor.

Then out of the South appears a young Gascon. His fortune is in his blade, his sword arm and his adroit mind. His ambition is to become a King's musketeer. How he wins the friendship of the three best swordsmen in Paris, comes to the rescue of the Queen's honor, foils the Cardinal, wins the hand of a beautiful girl and becomes an officer in the Musketeers form the frame work of the story of "The Three Musketeers."

Moral Defeat

It is more than likely that the exciting events that are taking place in China have caused two or three very significant items of interest from other parts of the world to be overlooked. Yet from not very far away there comes almost a steady stream of news that indicates that not only in China but elsewhere the Japanese spell is broken, or breaking. Disguise it as one may, the utter defeat of Chang Tso-lin is a Japanese defeat. Some will be inclined to deny this. The case, however, is clear. The defeat of Chang Tso-lin is a defeat for Japan, for Japanese ideals of autocratic government dominated by the militarist spirit, even for Japanese military strategy and, above all, for Japanese aims and purposes in Manchuria, Mongolia and North China generally. Just as Turkey's defeat was a moral defeat for Germany.

Those who have also watched carefully the news from elsewhere, especially from Vladivostok and the Maritime Province, cannot avoid the conclusion that there is a general breakdown of the Japanese advance on the mainland of Asia. Into the reasons for this breakdown this is not the place to enter, but the opinion may be hazarded that the breakdown is due to Japan's successful attempt to prevent the inclusion of the Chita and Moscow Governments in the invitation to Washington.

That success was a technical victory for Japan, but it was a moral defeat. From the moment it was accomplished the Japanese cause took a plunge on the down grade, and has not yet reached the final bump that awaits it at the bottom. At Washington, Japan had to consent to bargain with China on the Shantung issue instead of doing what she had determined to do, namely, dictate to China about Shantung in direct "negotiations." At Washington in spite of Japanese opposition the principle of the withdrawal of foreign troops from Chinese soil was approved, and Japan was given a hint that this applied especially to her, the hint being so strong that we find her on the point of withdrawing her troops from Hankow, where they were illegally established in large numbers, during the Revolution.

At Washington began the moral defeat that made it impossible for Japan to dominate the Tariff Revision Commission at Shanghai by imposing on the Commission a standard of commodity prices that would greatly have favored Japan.

This line of thought cannot be carried further here, but attention may be called to one of the most significant signs of the moral defeat of Japan, namely, the breakdown of Japanese supremacy in Vladivostok. Recent telegrams from that port indicate that Merkuloff's "Government" there shares the condition of bankruptcy enjoyed by Japanese-controlled institutions elsewhere. The Merkuloff Government, as everybody knows, is a Japanese institution, inaugurated by the Japanese Military Command, financed with Japanese funds, carrying out Japanese policies, and dependent for its support, its continued existence, solely on Japanese bayonets. The Merkuloff Government has never been in any sense a popular government, but the people of Vladivostok have put up with it because there was for the time being no alternative.

Two months ago, however, it had become obvious that there was a very strong revolt against the Merkuloff Government even in the National Assembly of the Maritime Province, which was itself the creature of Merkuloff, that is to say, of Japan. The members of the Assembly who represented constituencies at some distance from Vladivostok, and were therefore not so directly under the thumb of Merkuloff, began to show very evident signs of restlessness. They actually began to raise questions about the way in which public funds were being used for the personal benefit of members of the Merkuloff Government. This discontent has grown from various causes until at last the whole Assembly is permeated with it, with open defiance even of Merkuloff and all his works. One message from Vladivostok states that there has been a new split in Merkuloff's Assembly, the issue having been taken on a resolution strongly condemnatory of Japanese methods in the port.

Nothing could be more significant than this revolt against the Japanese-imposed Merkuloff Government on the part of the great body of Kappellist troops. These troops have been in Japanese pay for months; they believed themselves to be fighting for a real Russia; they therefore own a great debt of gratitude to Japan for providing them with arms, ammunition, funds and every requisite for the campaign they have been carrying on. In spite of this they have turned against their paymasters. They have discovered at last that Japanese interest in the success of the Kappellist troops was not a disinterested thing, that Japanese designs were not to see the country controlled by some other Russian group than the group represented at Chita, but by some group that was representative of Japanese desires.

The disillusionment has been a long time coming, but by it has come at last. It has been quite clear for some time that the illusion could not be maintained much longer, and nowhere was this more fully realized than in Japan: hence the dispatch of a new division of troops to the Maritime Province, without any withdrawal as yet of the troops already stationed there. The world is told that they are to be withdrawn, but the present split is being made an excuse for keeping them in the Province. The fact is, that Japan, having seen that before long a time would come when Japanese rule, disguised as the Merkuloff Government, would no longer be tolerated, except when backed up by larger forces than Japan has hitherto maintained, has doubled her military forces for the purpose of either maintaining the Merkuloff Government or of setting up another marionette show, whichever may appear the more expedient; but the necessity for doubling the military forces of occupation is in itself a sign of moral defeat.

Correct Breathing A Long Step Toward Health And Happiness

The writer of this practical advice on the art of breathing imparts his methods successfully to the friends of the Police Department of New York and has been highly commended there for his help in making bigger, better and stronger policemen.

BY CAPT. E. V. GALLIARD

It is through ignorance of our own powers and of how to develop and use them that we fail to attain happiness, and in the case of each of us the extent of that ignorance may easily be measured by simply noting the degree in which we fall short of being happy. Instinctively we feel this, and instinctively therefore we are all endeavoring to dispel our ignorance and reaching out for more exact knowledge of our powers and how to develop and use them.

To express this deficiency and inefficiency in a brief simile, civilized mankind may be likened to a tree that is conscious of the nutrient drawn by it from the ground, but has so completely overlooked the fact that a large proportion of its substance must be drawn from the air that it has neglected to put forth leaves. We all know that such a tree would very quickly perish, and, as a matter of fact, it is equally true that the very portion of the human race which considers itself most highly civilized is in reality creeping along on the very brink of extinction—for no other reason than the fact that it has fallen under the evil spell of an ignorance and neglect of one of its most vital functions. This ignorance and neglect are indeed precisely similar to that which in our simile we have attributed to our imaginary tree which overlooked the usefulness of air and the consequent desirability of putting forth leaves to catch the air.

WE DEPEND ON AIR

In other words, we have overlooked the fact that a large part of our material bodies is derived from the air, and that when we neglect to so develop and utilize our lungs as to get from the air the full benefit which nature intends us to receive from the air we pay the penalty not only in decreased bodily efficiency, but also, and in an even greater degree, in a certain falling short of mental alertness and spiritual vision.

The cultivation of our lungs— which means the cultivation of the art of breathing—ought to be the very foundation and commencement of our educational system, instead of being so little understood and appreciated that very little information about the subject is brought to the attention of our children while they are still in the receptive and plastic stage of human life.

A life time of aimlessness of purpose, of looseness of thinking, of clumsiness of action and barrenness of achievement is the penalty which many of our children pay as the natural and direct result of this criminal neglect on our part to properly instruct and train them. Far better fit this respect is the custom of the so-called savage races, in which the mothers most carefully watch the breathing habits of their children and take effective measures to prevent them from falling, for example, into such a slovenly practice as inhaling through the mouth instead of through the nose.

MOST IMPORTANT FUNCTION

That the art of breathing is in reality the most important function of the human body is shown and established by the fact that, although we can live without food for weeks and without water for days, the best of us could not live without air for more than two or three minutes at most. Death would ensue from lack of oxygen, the element which gives warmth and energy to the body—the element which makes it possible for the food which we eat to be transformed into muscle and bone and tissue—the element in short which can be called the steam of life—the steam which imparts motion and effectiveness to that wonderful machine, the human body, so perfect in its adaptability to all purposes of life and yet so neglected and misapprehended through ignorance that the average man lives but half his possible days and during the days that he does live enjoys but half of his possible energy and efficiency, and consequently attains to but half his possible happiness.

Although, therefore, a part of this falling short of the full abundance of life comes from failure to understand and care for the stomach—the galvanic center in which the food is received and separated in various constituents required by the body—yet by far the greater part of our ineffectiveness comes from failure to understand and operate the lungs.

A celebrated English physician, Dr. Tucker Wise, says: "Learn to inhale habitually through the nose and not by the mouth. Children ought to be taught this habit when they are young. The nasal passages act as a filter for the inhaled air. Many atmospheric impurities and disease germs which would otherwise enter the throat and lungs are thus arrested and are finally expelled with the nasal mucus."

Again, Dr. Clinton Wagner in his treatise on mouth breathing by children says: "Those of mature age must be impressed with the necessity of persisting in nose breathing. It is extremely difficult for one who has been addicted for any length of time to the habit of mouth breathing to break himself of that bad habit. For those who are addicted to the practice of keeping the mouth open during sleep only enforced closure may be successfully carried out by means of a linen support over the lower jaw, properly adjusted."

The fact is that the nose has several important functions. The one with which we are here concerned is its use as a passage through which the air should properly obtain access to the lungs. The air passing through the nose is raised to the temperature of the body before it reaches the larynx. Furthermore, the air is made moist by the secretions of the nose, and the hairs which grow in the nose act as a filter, which separates the impurities from the air so that they do not enter the lungs. This is easily demonstrated after you have been in the streets by passing the point of your little finger—covered with a corner of your handkerchief—into the nostrils. When you withdraw your finger and the handkerchief you will find it covered with dirt which would otherwise have passed into the throat and lungs and possibly caused serious trouble.

Change In Parental Psychology Is Step In Progress Of Evolution

BY PERCY FRIDENBERG, M.D.

There is a tale that is told of a traveler hiking through the highlands of West Virginia in the early days of the republic. Coming at nightfall, to a little cabin in a clearing and in quest of lodgings for the night, he addressed a venerable mountaineer who sat in front of the hut and asked politely for bed and a meal. The aged inhabitant answered as civilly, but intimated that his father would have to be consulted before he could give assent. On being asked where his father was, he replied that he was upstairs being spanked by the speaker's granddad. Si non e vero e ben trovato.

This patriarchal relation could be found in all primitive communities, in most highlands and in pioneer civilization. It persists as well in communities where the family life is perforce limited and condensed, as in the ghettos of eastern Europe, and where the contact of three generations makes for extreme respect for authority and age.

The relation of offspring to parent is an interesting one from the purely biological standpoint. With the very primitive organism, often a single cell of comparatively simple structure, the parent merely divided into twins which from their inception were, so to speak, independent and full grown. With increasing complexity of structure the offspring was progressively subordi-

As the life forms became more and more complex, a longer and longer period was required for the offspring to attain not only maturity but a degree of growth and intelligence enabling them to shift for themselves. At a low stage the egg must be hatched by the warmth of the mother's body. Further on, with the birds, the young must not only be hatched, but fed, until the fledgling is able to fly. Among mammals the young must learn how to get their own food after they have ceased to take the breast.

Man, of all the animals, has the longest period of immaturity, of infancy and childhood during which he is figuratively and literally unable to shift for himself. The progression seems, however, to go on even in man as shown in a comparison of savage and civilized races. The higher the civilization the longer the period of immaturity and apprenticeship.

In the social life of civilized man, however, we have to deal with a new factor of ever increasing importance. The place of the parent may be taken, and is largely taken, by others. Teachers and companions supply, if not sustenance, at least stimulus and mental pabulum. The institution of property which, like food and instruction, may be transferred to the young from an alien, or non-parental source, is another consideration. The incentive to independent thought and action, inculcated in the schools, must have as a result a definite shortening of the period of intellectual immaturity, and in our social schemes this is of much more practical importance than a full developed physical organization.

The bodily weak, be they children, cripples or sick, are protected and safeguarded by society whose laws, we may do well to remember, are framed not by the young but by the adult. In fact, we judge of the civilization of a community largely by the degree to which it protects its young and helpless. Not only its infants, but its adolescents and women.

The psychology of the parent is a rather complex reaction to this situation. It is not only his attitude to the physical offspring, but his reaction to the sum of his capabilities, physical and spiritual, of an individual. It depends partly on the age of the parent and on his environment. A young father is naturally more progressive, more tolerant, more inclined to see his child as a nearly ready adult than as an infant.

In a roving population the young acquire self-confidence and independence at a comparatively early age. Environment, too, plays its part, as does habit of thought. The father who is a teacher and knows how small the entire sum of human knowledge is and how helpless many of us are in emergencies, even after we have attained maturity, will be inclined to look upon his child as a permanent infant, as it were. The man of action who has usually matured early himself and had children before middle age will encourage his offspring to follow his example in taking responsibilities, in showing self-assertion; in a word, in following the father's example.

Finally the psychology of the parent is largely influenced by the psychology of the child. One of the most striking features of modern educational tendencies is the constant insistence on self-help, on co-operation, on community spirit and on initiative in the children. While this must have what the French have so well called the defects of its good qualities, it produces, in the American child at least, a very striking self-reliance, independence and optimism. All of these qualities are of the greatest value for survival in the struggle for existence under the conditions given by our social scheme. The parent cannot fail to be impressed, as is the foreigner, by the readiness of his child to speak up for itself and to act for itself. He will overlook the mental and spiritual immaturity the more, as there is, as it were, no premium on these qualities, or rather no great disadvantage in their lack.

The attendant drawbacks of half knowledge, of conceit, of rashness and of contempt for age and authority are viewed with a more or less humorous tolerance by a parent who, like most American fathers, has himself grown up in the same school of life and of class room. His psychology will be in part that of the philosopher and that of the poet. Of the philosopher who realizes that the best parent cannot be a Providence and must strive to make himself not indispensable, but dispensable. Of the poet who, like Longfellow, sensed that the child is father to the man, that the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts, and that the boy's will is the wind's will.

A rather pedantic parent in cultured Boston was lecturing his child and noting with disapproval that that was not what he did when he was young. To which the young hopeful replied: "Father, we have just been taught in our biology course that variation in form and function of the offspring is the first step in that evolution which has made for the progress of the human race." There, in a nutshell, is the reason why parental psychology is changing.

WINE TAX HEAD
(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, June 10.—The Cabinet
this morning decided to appoint
Mr. Li Chen as Chief of the Wine and Tobacco Bureau of Hupel.

"Uncle Joe" Celebrates 86th Birthday

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, inveterate smoker of long black cigars and for many years a leader in Congress, has celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday.

The "long black one" you see him fingering here was presented by one of his admirers.

This morning the employees of these departments, about 700 in all, assembled in the Company's compound, and besting the shipbuilding and engineering sheds called upon the men to leave their work and join them in the talgo demonstration.

The police arrested some of the demonstrators, but finally all the employees were forced to stop
